

A place to pause.

A small reading pavilion in a fictional garden.

Original illustrative drawings. Not a built project.

Space for a slower day.

A sheltered place to read, meet and look out.

The concept uses a simple structural rhythm and two open edges to connect with the garden.

DESIGN QUESTIONS

- 01 Where does a visitor arrive?
- 02 How does daylight cross the room?
- 03 Which views should remain uninterrupted?

A portfolio can show the question
as clearly as the finished drawing.

An open edge.

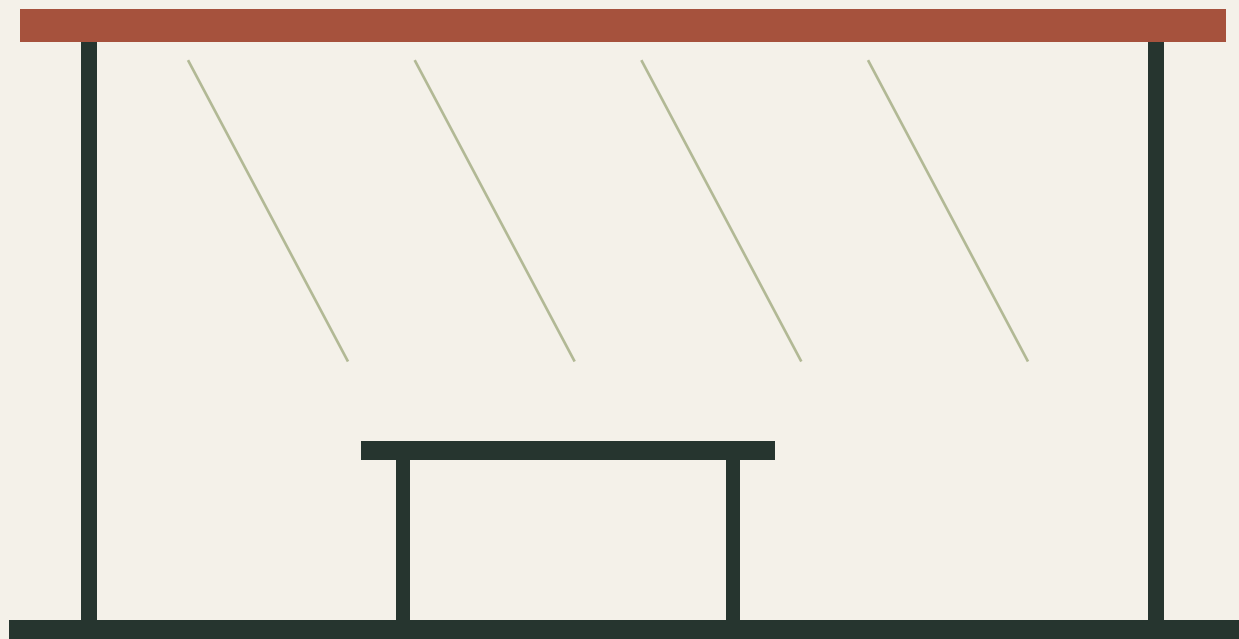

Schematic plan / illustrative, not for construction

A quiet service edge supports a generous shared room.
An uninterrupted opening faces the garden.

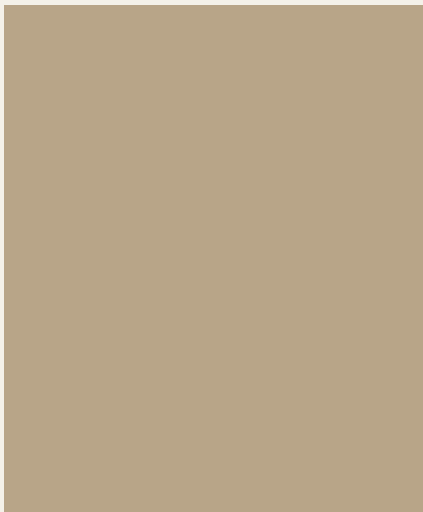

Light, held lightly.

Schematic section / illustrative, not for construction

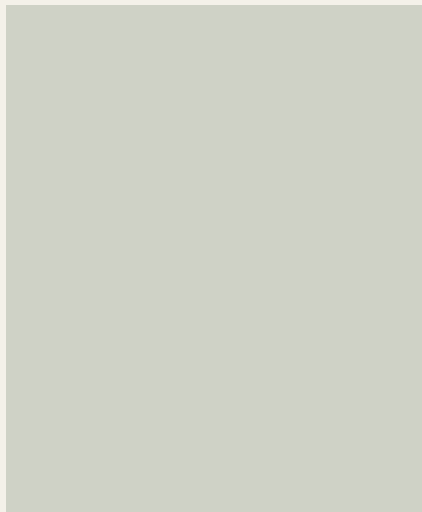

A deep canopy softens the threshold.
A clear span keeps the interior adaptable.

A restrained palette.

TIMBER

MINERAL

METAL

Material notes are presented alongside the drawings to connect a visual idea with its intended atmosphere.

Make the thinking visible.

A concise project story brings together the brief,
a plan, a section and a material direction.
In your own portfolio, identify your role and credit collaborators wherever work was produced as a team.

ABOUT THIS EXAMPLE

Created by Portfolia to demonstrate its PDF reader.
This is a fictional, schematic design study.
It is not a customer portfolio or technical guidance.